Life goes on, and so do hotel openings. Next year promises a slew of extraordinary new properties around the world, from Mexico to London to Sumba. Some are snazzy city hotels while others are immersions into untouched nature or traditional cultures. What they share is an independent spirit, a painstaking attention to detail, a willingness to rewrite the rules and—in quite a few cases—genuine attention paid to sustainability. Whenever we're ready to travel, they'll be waiting.

It's a place of power: Sculptural peaks rise up around the exciting new architecture. Renewed yet respectful of its original structure, the hotel is already welcoming open-minded globetrotters, providing time-transcending experiences through art, nature, relaxation and architecture. The place stimulates visitors to think differently. Where walls shift, rooms shape themselves into telescopes with a distant view.
